What the IPF Supports

In forming the IPF, we consulted WASL members to determine the type of work and activities the fund would support, with an emphasis on women-led peace and security initiatives that are not traditionally supported.

They identified the following four thematic activities: promoting peace, resilience, equal rights, and pluralism (PREP); increasing women’s representation and gender sensitivity in peace and security policies, addressing conflict-related sexual and gender-based violence; and deradicalization, rehabilitation and reintegration of fighters.

Between 2018 and 2020 the areas of work eligible for IPF funding expanded to include the following interrelated women-led peace and security activities:

THE NEXUS OF THE WPS AND THE PVE AGENDAS

COVID-19 and a Flexible Funding Approach

Afghanistan's COVID response

Iraq's COVID response

Kenya's COVID response

As crises and violent settings change, local women peacebuilding organizations (WPBOs) adjust their work to respond. The onset of COVID-19 impacted our partners' existing work, but they did not and could not stop their peace work.

To enable them the flexibility of adjusting and responding to uncertainty, and following consultations with partners and donors, we developed a flexible funding stream. By offering flexible funding, our partners with humanitarian response capacities and know-how were able to pivot their immediate activities to prepare for and respond to COVID-19 in a gender- and conflict-sensitive manner.

We also introduced bridge funding to provide temporary institutional and programmatic support for our partners to keep their doors open while ongoing projects were halted or funding was pulled due to the pandemic.

Do we prioritize the resources for COVID-19
or peace?
We can't make that decision.
Health is one of the key factors in peace.
